continued to be used by increasing the exposure time till 1984. A new Beta Ray Applicator was purchased and the old one was sent back to the Stores. In August, 1984, along with other instruments, Beta Ray Applicator was passed for condemnation in the meeting of the Condemnation Board of the Institute held on 10.8.1984 and was then sent to the Central Stores Depot, AIIMS, New Delhi. The condemned applicator was auctioned along with other articles on 4.2.1985 as surgical scraps to Shri Adbul Zabbar, DDA Colony, Turkman Gate, Delhi, who on contact, has stated that he does not keep material with him and disposes off as early as possible and does not keep any record of the same.

(c) An inquiry has been ordered to fix responsibility for violation of safety rules.

(d) Yes. All efforts have been made to locate the Eye Applicator in the premises of the person to whom it had been auctioned but it is unlikely to be traced because the radiation would be very low to be detected. The health hazard aspect has been very carefully examined by the experts (Radiation Safety Committee, AIIMS.) It is understood that it is not a public health hazard.
